

Teaching procedure for incoming Erasmus Students at the Food Technology Dept, University of West Attica

Since the courses are officially taught in the Greek language, for our incoming Erasmus students, the following teaching procedure alternatives are foreseen at the Dept of Food Science and technology:

- Small Erasmus groups are formed (depending on the number of incoming students per semester) and the course material is taught in English by the responsible lecturer. The final exam is in English.
- Projects are assigned to each student, supervised in frequent time intervals by the responsible teaching staff, and the outcome deliverable is evaluated accordingly.
- In lab courses, the Erasmus student is attending the lab course by getting a place in a student group for each experiment exercise. The requested learning material is being translated, by the teaching staff, during the procedure. The final exam is in English.

Our experience, from the previous years, is that such an approach yields a positive knowledge outcome for most Erasmus students.
